Addie Stanton's Real Name and His.

Mrs. Anna Hermann, the aged mother of Henry Hermann, one of the men who attempted to "stand up" Gambler Phil Daly in Ella Hammond's flat, at 406 Fourth avenue, last Monday, attempted suicide after hearing of her son's disgrace. She tried to strangle herself with her hands. Then she fell down in spasms. She was brought too with difficulty and made no subsequent attempt on her life. Her family denied this afternoon that she had tried to kill herself. She is housekeeper in the tenement at 165 Avenue C.

About the same time Hermann was sitting in one of the examination rooms in the Jefferson Morket Police Court in charge of Central Office Detective Cash, Edward Meredith, his accomplice, a bullet from whose pistol so nearly ended the old gambler's existence, was in another room in charge of Detective Sergt, Adams.

Addie Stanton was in Sergt, McComb's office making a full confession to Assistant District-Attorney Hartmann.

Ella Hammond was willing to do the same, but the chances are that her and Meredith will go to Sing Sing for long terms.

Hermann has also turned State's evidence and will be apt to go free in consequence. Such a throng was never before seen in Jefferson Market Police Court. Fast men, and faster women occupied every seat, stood up in the sisle and packed the rear of the Gus Guerrero, the pedestrian; sat on a front bench. Near by stood Abe Marks, the bookmaker, and ex-Gov. Lee of Wyoming. Gamblers were there in force, too. There was a murmur of admiration when Phil Daly, with a black silk skull-cap on his head, walked into Court by the rear entrance.

The powder marks could be plainly seen about his left eye. He was accompanied by his legal advisers. Howe & Hummel, and several of their clerks and his son, Phil, jr. He went at once to the Judge's private room where he made two complaints, one of assault in the first degree with attempt to kill, and another of robbery in the first degree.

The four prisoners in each complaint were treated each as a principal. In the com-plaint Mr. Daly repeats his original story about being decoyed to the flat by a letter from Addie Stanton, where he was attacked by the two masked men, who ordered him to throw up his hands and so forth. DALY CONFRONTS HEBMANN.

He was confronted in court to-day first with Hermann. Detective Sergeant Crowley, who arrested the latter, hung a white hand-kerchief over his face, and made him stand up in the middle of the room.

Then, in the midst of a crowd of police captains, sergeants, policemen, detectives, lawyers, their clerks, and reporters, Mr. Daly walked in.

He calmly adjusted his glasses and looked steadily at the masked face before him. The room was as silent as the tomb. Every one expected to hear Daly sav:

"That is the man who shot me," because he has all along maintained that it was the smaller of the two men who fired at him, but he didn't.

On the contrary, he said:

"I cannot say that that was one of the men. I think it was."

"I cannot say that that was one of the men.

It is well to mention here again that Hermann has confessed.

Then Mr. Daly was taken to the other

There Detective Hickey had masked Meredith with a white handkerchief. He is a tall, fine-looking fellow and wears eyeglasses. His hair is black and curiy. He dresses very "Stand up," said Phil, gruffly.

"The masked figure arose, as rigid as a statue.

"Now say Hold up your hands!" commanded the old sport.

A faint sound came from the hidden lips.

"Louder," said Daly.

A faint r sound was the only answer.

"Louder. Do you hear?" said Daly answer.

"Hold up your hands," came very meekly out of the handkerchief. out of the handkerchief.
"That is the man. He is the one," hissed Daly, becoming visibly excited. "His voice was a little stronger, but that is the man who fired at me," and his fingers twitched convulsionly.

The handkerchief was removed from Meredith's face. He had not paled a shade. * MEREDITH'S NERVE.

MEREDITH'S NERVE.

In fact, there was a merry twinkle observed in the black eyes behind the glassos. He sank laughingly back into his seat between two detectives. He was the coolest man in that crowd.

His nerve is something wonderful. He gazed defiantly at Daly, until the latter was taken away.

Meantime Lawyer Le Barbier and ex-Assemblyman James D. McClelland were doing what they could in a legal way for the benefit of the two women. Right here, in the midst of all the excitement, Detective Sergt. Steve O'Brien led a smooth-faced, sandy-haired youth to the bar and, leaning over, whispered to Justice Gorman: "I'd like to have this man remanded until to-morrow morning." manded until to-morrow morning."

HERMANN'S WIFE AND SISTER.

Just then a rather good-looking, middleaged woman entered the court-room with another younger woman.

"That is Hermann's wife and sister," said some one, and the reporter stepped up and asked them if that was so. They admitted it, but positively refused to speak about the case. They would not even give their address.

"Why?" asked the reporter.

"We have been cautioned not to do so."
Detectives Hayes, Brett, Crowley and Hickey, who had shadowed the men for at least two days, calmly declared that they did not know where they lived. They also professed the greatest ignorance as to the previous life of the two men.

An Evenino World reporter learned, however, and is able to state positively that both men are professional burglars.

They have done time. It is believed their pictures are in the Rogues' Gallery. Hermann is married. He is only out of prison five months, after doing a three-years' term for burglary. He lives at 169 Avenue C, with his wife.

Meredith, whom it is hard to believe would associate with such a man, is single. His ad-dress could not be learned exactly, but he lives somewhere in One Hundred and Sixth street.

Only for Detectives Hickey, Crowley and Police Capt, Reilly he would have surely escaped. He had all preparations made to leave town when they swooped down and arrested him. ADDIE STANTON'S REAL NAME.

The woman Stanton's right name is Adelaide Edgecomb. Her father, Lewis Edgecomb, is a prominent citizen of Waverly, in Tioga County, this State.

She wrote him a letter asking him to come on and help her in this trouble.

He sent a telegram refusing. She, it is believed, was the prime instigator of the plot. It was concocted nearly two weeks ago.

On the night before the assault Stanton,
Hammond, Meredith and Hermann sat up all night drinking, playing cards and discussing the programme laid out for next day.

ADDIE THE PRIME MOVER. Addie said: "He generally carries $20,000 in his clothes."
"We'll get it," said Meredith.

They remained together in the front room until Daly's knock was heard at the door. Then Mrs. Hammond's nerve failed her and she went to some lady friend's downstairs. The men hid in the middle room and Addie pened the door. What followed is too well known to need repetition here.

In giving out the story inspector Byrnes says that the men thought Daly, being a good family man, would give up easily to save his reputation.

THE SHOOTING ACCIDENTAL

They never dreamed of having to use the revolver, and would not have done so, but that Meredith became rattled and pulled the trigger accidentally.

When arraigned before Justice Gorman this morning he did not look like a man who would lose his nerve under any circumstances. He and Hermann did not speak or notice one another at all when they met on the stand in front of the magistrate.

The two women were jammed up alongside of them, but no one of the quartet even looked at each other.

DALT'S AFFIDAVIT READ. Breathless silence ensued while Clerk Heimburger read Mr. Daly's complaint to the prisoners.

In the affidavit, speaking of his first visit to the Fourth avenue flat last Friday, Mr. Daly When Addie opened the door she said: "Oh, fr. Daly, I am so glad to see you, but your riends have got tired of waiting and gone

ALL VERY CHEERFUL.

Clerk Heimburger became so nervous that he could not finish reading the complaint, and little Abe Hummel took it and finished. While it was being read Meredith calmly stroked his black imperial.

Hermann laughed at the reporters and the women looked tired.

When it was finished Lawyer Howe said:

"In view of the fact, Your Honor, that one of these men is now making a full confession to Inspector Byrnes, I would ask that at the end of these proceedings the men be remanded to the custody of Inspector Byrnes."

Lawyer McClelland offered an objection, but it did not amount to anything.

Phil Daly took the Bible, and swore that he had told the truth and the whole truth in his affidavit.

Tnen Justice Gorman asked the women if they had anything to say.

Speaking for them, Lawyer Le Barbier said:

ADDIE CONFESSES. "Nothing now. Miss Stanton has made a statement which is in Assistant District-Attorney Hartman's hands. We waive examination for the present."

Mr. Hartman, who appeared for the prosecution, sat beside the Julge, and admitted that he had a statement from the woman. He would not say what it was.

Here it is fair to say that throughout The Evenino World has taken this view of the case that Daly knew the woman, that she did not shoot, but that two men did have a hand in it, and that one of them did the shooting.

When the magistrate asked Hermann for his pedigree he said he was thirty years old and a butcher by trade. He declined to plead or give his address.

"Why do you refuse?" asked the Justice.

HERMANN CONFESSES TOO.

"I hope you won't insist on his answering," said Mr. Howe. "He is making a confession to Inspector Byrnes, and it is by that gentleman's wishes that he refuses to give his residence or to plead."

Of course that settled it.

Meredith was equally reticent as to his address and also refused to plead. He and Hermann were remanded back to Police Headquarters.

Headquarters.

The women were committed to the Jefferson Market Prison without ball. A further hearing in the case will be had next Sunday morning, by which time Inspector Byrnes hopes to be able to have the while story straightened out.

Meantime the Inspector maints that the talk about Daly's being a victim of the badger game is all "rot."

"It is nothing more than a bold altempt to rob a man who is generally known to carry a large sum of money.

"Why did you encourage the belief that the woman did the shooting?"
"Because a detective who tells the public what he is doing in unravelling a crime points out his line of action and gives notice to the suspected persons to make their escape," he concluded.

"But he would not tell what was the scrape till, when I saw the account of Phil Dalv in the paper, I asked him and he said that was it."

HENRY HERMANN'S CORPESSION.

From a confession made and sworn to by Henry Hermann this afternoon it was learned that the attack upon Phil Daly was the result of an organized plot on the part of Meredith, Annie Stamton and himself.

In his confession Hermann states that letters were sent to three different citizens of this city, and that Daly was the first and only one to respond.

The shot was fired from a pistol in Meredith's hands, but was entirely accidental.

He exonerates the Hammond woman from all share in the plot, as she had nothing whatever to do with it.

WHERE IS MR. CARTWRIGHT?

Saratoga, Dec. 8.—Pedestrian George Cartwright, the Englishman who was a contestant in the recent six days' walk in New York, and who has made his headquarters here for some time, was to have been married yesterday to a Miss Hawkins, living here, but when the time for the ceremony came he falled to show up. It had been reported a few days ago that he had a wife and children in England, but he denied this and went on with arrangements for his marriage, even going so far as to furnish apartments for housekeeping. A brother of the young lady made hot search for Cartwright yearerday, and will wreak vengeance on him if he terday, and will wreak vengeance on him if t finds him in this country. I don't know anything concerning the alleged engagement to be married, but I am quite certain that he has been married before, and has, or did have, a wife and family living in England.

He promised to settle everything as soon as he got his share of the gate receipts, but has not kept his promise.

When O'Brien asked him for the rest of the debt Cartwright coolly told him that he wouldn't pay it; that he (O'Brien) had advertised him to race without the proper authority, and that all bills paid by O'Brien were on his own account.

Rear-Admiral Gherardi has not yet received instructions as to the Galena's destination, but he said it might be Hayti. On the other hand, the vessel might be ordered on a cruise sround the Horn or on a general West Indian cruise.

Though the Galena's armament is not of the latest type, her deck bristles with formidable-looking cannon. They consist of one 60-pound 5 3-10-inch breech-loading rifle, one 8-inch muzzle-loading rifle, throwing a projectile of 180 pounds, which explodes by impact, and also the regulation fuse-shell; six 9-inch smoothbore Dahlgrens, firing a 90-pound shot; one Galing gun and one 3-inch breech-loading rifle and two 30-pound breech-loaders. She will take with her five tons of powder and 400 pounds of gun-cotton, to be used in torpedoes.

The other side of the story of that queer marriage between ex-Minister Harry F. Auld and Mrs. Emma H. Christie was unearthed by THE EVENING WORLD reporter this morn-

From these new developments that have turned up it would appear that Mrs. Christie may have been the aggrieved party, and that Mr. Auld might have been endeavoring to

Mr. Auld might have been endeavoring to play a sharp game on the widow.

Joseph Cooke, a brother of Mrs. Christie, is superintendent of the linemen at the Western Union Telegraph Company station at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Lexington avenue. The reporter called on him this morning.

"My sister," he said, "has been out of town since a week ago yesterday. She left immediately after the marriage, and I believe by the advice of her counsel.

"I believe his name is De La Mar. I knew nothing whatever of this previous marriage by contract, but from facts I have learned since of this minister's doings, I should, if I had been in my sister's place, have horse-whipped him well before making him marry me."

". Where is Mrs. Christie at present?" where is Mrs. Christic at present "

"I really do not know. She is out of

"None that I know of. Now, if you will go to Mr. Henry G. Cooper, at 2662 Third avenue, I am confident you will get the information you desire. I believe he knows all about the case."

The reporter first called on Lawyer De La Mar, at 110 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. That gentleman denied that he was acting as Mrs. Christie's counsel.
"In fact," he said, "I have never seen the lady.

"In fact," he said, "I have never seen the lady.

'I admit that I know a little about the case, but I'd rather not divulge it. You go and see Mr. Cooper, at 2662 Third avenue. He knows all about it and gave me what little information I possess."

The Evening World man having been twice advised to see Mr. Cooper, boarded a North Third avenue car and jumped off at Mr. Cooper's office.

The gentleman was in and alone. He is a real-estate dealer and has lived in the neighborhood of Mr. Auld's church for nearly twenty years.

borbood of Mr. Auld's church for nearly twenty years.

"Mr. Cooper," began The Evening World man, "I have been twice advised to see you in reference to the marriage of Mr. Henry Auld to Miss Emma H. Christie."

"Well, I have known Mrs. Christie ever since she wore short dresses and the reports about her being a designing widow and a bad woman are entirely untrue.

"This Mr. Auld," continued Mr. Cooper, "is either a tool or a knave, and from what I know I should say that he belongs to the latter class.

"In the first place he says he never loved Mrs. Christie about two years ago, when that lady first joined St, Mary's Church, were remarked by every one and as plain as the nose on your face.

"The minister. Dr. Thompson, of course (ectined, and then Mr. Auld, with his own hand, wrote the contract as published, and turned to Mrs. Christie, saying: 'Emma, read that and sign. It will answer as well. We will have the blessing after Lent is over.'

"Satisfied, Mrs. Christie signed. A copy was made and given to her. Dr. Auld kept the oriental."

was made and given to her. Dr. Auid kept the original.

When Mrs. Christie recovered from an illness she went to Bishop Potter with her copy contract. She told him the whole story. He said it was a legal marriage. Then Mrs. Christie went back and demanded the origi-nal contract from Mr. Auid.

"He coolly informed her that he had burned it.

'' How dare you do that?' she exclaimed, and then she said she would take legal proceedings. The next day she received the contract from Mr. Auld.

'' Another visit to Bishop Potter aroused Another visit to Disable that reverend gentleman's ire. He sat down at his desk and penned a letter to Mr. Auld.

"I have asked for his resignation,' he said simply.

Then Mrs. Christie returned home satisfied. She afterwards found that the Bishop had told Mr. Auld by letter that he was legally married and advising him to take the blessing. blessing.

"This was about three weeks before the last marriage. How that took place you already know. She was dragged into a street-car and up to the Rev. Victor C. Smith's house.

AND HIS NAME WAS PAT MALLOY.

He Was a Tartar for the " Times "... Their Case Receives a Damaging Blow. [BY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION.] LONDON, Dec. 7.—Pat Malloy, the recusans witness, was haled before the Parnell Commis-ion this morning.

He proved a most unsatisfactory witness. To He proved a most unsatisfactory witness. To the surprise of the Court and the mortification of the Times's counsel he swore he knew nothing to connect the Irish leaders with the crimes at Phomis Park and observant.

He denied everything that he was expected to reveal by the prosecution, and with skilful questioning the Attorney-General could get nothing out of him.

It sppeared that the witness knew little of the crimes that had been perpetrated in Ireland beyond what was familiar to everybody; and it came out that the Times's agent had cooked up the charges to which the witness was expected to testify.

Mrs. Bishop is twenty-five years of age, and was married to the mind-reader Dec. 4, 1886, at Boston. It was her second marriage, she having got a divorce from her former husband, on the ground of abandonment and cruelty. Bishop had just been honized by the Boston public, and Miss Mack, or Mrs. Loud, fell in love with him at one of his readings.

In her complaint Mrs. Bishop alleges that her husband broke his marriage vows on June 10, 1887, at the Hoffman House with a woman whose name she does not know. Bishop is believed to be at dresent in Alabama on a professional tour through the South.
